There have been some pretty big deals made over the summer. I'm sure some of them are good. And some of them stink. Well, at least that's how it seems to me. From what I can tell, certain people seem to have one of two ways of going about a deal. They are either a) a complete chameleon…changing their mind, their enthusiasm, their actions, everything, basically going in the direction of the people they're making a deal with, or b) they become their own worst enemies, wanting to dig in and hold their ground, even against something that seems very far out of their norms. So, what does this have to do with a music library? Well, if I'm not going to criticize people for change, then I don't think it's fair to do the same myself. I'm at a point where I have to accept change. I've been working in the music business for about 20 years now (yay!) and doing things the way I've always done them has always gotten me into trouble. I've never met a client that liked what I did. So what's the point of being a music librarian if all of the clients hate what I do? I do find that with time, the more that I do things the way I'd like to do them, the more patrons like the services I provide. I'm at a point where it's just getting to the point that I can't swing
